

An Invitation to... Tune Out the Noise

We're excited to tell you about a new documentary from Dimensional titled Tune Out the Noise. We engaged Academy Award-winning filmmaker Errol Morris to help us make the film. It is about the birth of modern finance and its impact on money management and investing.

Told through the stories of 15 people who were involved, the film captures how finance became a science and challenged the traditional methods of investing. It chronicles how this shift led to the invention of index funds, the founding of Dimensional, and the evolution of client-focused advice—all of which have ultimately benefited investors around the world.

We're inviting you to watch the documentary before it is made available more broadly. It is a feature-length film with a running time of 88 minutes, and we highly recommend watching it at home on a television, especially with family and friends.

Here is a link and access code to stream it online now through June 1:

Access code: MARKETSWORK

Also available here is a "playbill" for the film that includes a short essay from Errol Morris describing how he thought about the story, a timeline on the history of modern finance, and an overview of the art collection featured prominently throughout the documentary.

We hope the film makes you feel confident and proud to be working with Dimensional. We also hope it has the power to open even more people's eyes to a better way to invest.
